

Teachers as Learners – Key Instructional Partners

Using

Researching Together: Engaging Minds CD-ROM

Friday November 26th 2004; 9.00pm – 3.30pm

One Day Workshop

This workshop focuses on developing the participants' ability to use the teaching and learning resource, Researching Together: Engaging Minds as a model for designing and delivering integrated curricula based around a variety of research formats. The formats provide intellectual scaffolding and incorporate information literacy skills, information and communication technologies, higher level thinking skills / tools, multiple intelligences, learning styles and student and staff self-assessment.

Participants of this program will develop knowledge and understanding of:

Planning, teaching and evaluating curriculum programs in partnership with classroom teachers to support the development of students' information and learning needs.

Development of online, inquiry based and thinking oriented curriculum using the Researching Together: Engaging Minds CD-ROM. Evidence based practices to measure the impact of the library's instructional intervention on student learning.

This professional development workshop will provide teachers with an opportunity to work with the resource and see how it can support them in their work.

Please note: Cost of workshop does not include Researching Together CDROM.
